I'd say about 2 weeks is sufficient.

That way there's not too much in the way of catching up for NEW folks as they could look forward to a NEW event coming up, and the 2 weeks '00likely would serve to bore too many current folks.

At least a week. Two or three weeks would be even better. If they last only a day, many people would miss them.
I'm on almost every day, but a lot of people budget their QSpending more carefully. 8)

However, I don't really understand the question. :\ It would really depend on the activity and what it involved.

each activity should last an hour or less. extremely long (and rewarding) activities should be two to three hours, and should be complete at the end of the session.
Habitat is not suited to long-running adventure games. each activity is a sub-game, and should be short term, with immediate rewards. Habitat itself is the long-term game.

There needs to ba a wide variety of lengths. Some, extremely difficult but very lucrative should take at least a month to solve. Other "surprizes" need to happen daily.
